No I did not speak with him. Based on your suggestion I invited the Englewood lead to submit an application. I also asked Henry English from Black United Fund. I spoke to another agency based on a recommendation. I was just now informed by Barbara that Children's Promise submitted an app to IVPA this spring. I had it forwarded and we are reviewing it.

We talked to one other possible organization but they still have not submitted an application. CHA appears is a much larger organization with a much larger budget and may have better management structure in place which is a positive. Both organizations have a history of substantial collaboration with community organizations. The analysis by Lorri indicates however that BUFI has had consistent issues with timeliness and accuracy of fiscal reports and that they also had some difficulty in that regard as a providing partner. I am leaning toward CHA which you mentioned initially as a lead for Woodlawn. Thoughts?
