A. Proposal Narrative

1. The Woodlawn Children's Promise Community (WCPC) is a community-based effort to radically improve the trajectory of children's live in Woodlawn, a Southside Chicago neighborhood. WCPC functions as an organizational hub of diverse resources that serve Woodlawn to promote whole child development and to improve the quality of various environments in a child's daily life—before, during and after school day; at home and throughout the neighborhood. Since 2009, WCPC has sought to coordinate and align programming and supports available through the school district, community-based organizations, faith-based institutions, and social service providers while also uplifting the role which residents and parents play as agents of community change.

Although we are a relatively new not-for-profit organization, our work to date demonstrates our ability to serve as Lead Agency for the Neighborhood Recovery Initiative (NRI) as well as establish and maintain key relationships with individuals and organizations to manage and perform Lead Agency functions. WCPC has developed significant capacity to manage annual revenues of $3 - $4 million, thanks in large part to the pro bono legal counsel of DLA Piper LLP whose guidance has helped us developed a broad set of policies and procedures—such as contract templates—used by WCPC Board and staff. In addition, we have received substantial financial advising from Deloitte LLP who has guided our development of financial tracking tools, policies and procedures. We also have an Accountant/Grants Manager as full-time staff to extend our financial reporting and operations such as payroll, accounts payable and receivable, financial controls, and audit compliance.

WCPC programming initiatives and key collaborative partnerships have ensured greater access to learning opportunities for students and family support opportunities for residents connected to 11 partner schools (9 public elementary schools, 1 public high school and 1 charter school grades 6-12). Our core student programs added more than 900 hours of extended learning time across Woodlawn schools during the 2010-2011 school year. We have provided free full-day, five-day-a-week summer programs for two years in a row, and are actively planning for summer 2012. In spring 2012 we began our first venture into a 5-day-a-week after-school program, serving 100 K-5th grade students in 3 schools. Our capacity to conduct quality work has been buttressed by the guidance and partnership of such organizations as the University of Chicago, Chicago Public Schools, Apostolic Church of God, Youth Guidance, Greater Chicago Food Depository, the AKArama Foundation, Children's Defense Fund Freedom Schools®, Network of Woodlawn (formerly New Communities Program-Woodlawn), the Young People's Project-Chicago, MAGIC, and the YMCA, among many others.

One major highlight of our collaborative community work is the WCPC Parent Leadership Initiative, which we have established in partnership with Youth Guidance (YG). Youth Guidance has a proven track record of successful family engagement programs in Chicago communities similar to Woodlawn. During the last two school years, WCPC and YG have implemented a parent leadership training series focused on developing parents as advocates for their children's education. The curriculum focuses on developmental pathways and skill-building opportunities for leadership and conducting meetings and events at the schools. WCPC and YG have established sets of recurring meetings at 10 participating schools—we meet regularly with principals to ensure that the work supports the schools' goals for parental involvement, and we also meet on a weekly basis in school-based "team" meetings and monthly with approximately 85 parents across all 10 schools. Over the course of two school calendar years, more than 120

Parent Leaders have participated in the WCPC Parent Leadership Initiative, and 51 individuals have been active for two years in a row.

Central to our success with this program has been the establishment of a management structure which utilizes full-time WCPC staff in collaboration with YG. WCPC and YG staff partner together to support the work of school teams and to respond to any situations that arise. Part of the work of the program is to establish and/or strengthen relationships between parents and school leadership, and this occasionally means to process challenges or miscommunications and to mediate or prevent conflicts and misunderstandings. During 2010-2011, parent leaders contributed more than 11,000 volunteer hours within the schools. In 2011-2012, parents have taken more active leadership by facilitating their own workshops for other parents and by planning additional events such as Real Men Read and Bring Your Parent to School Day.

One highlight of our youth-focused programming is our partnership with the Children's Defense Fund (CDF) Freedom Schools® After School and Summer Programs. This partnership allows us to utilize a national program model to provide cultural enrichment and engaging activities through a literacy-based curriculum steeped in the stories and themes of the Civil Rights Movement. To date we have conducted two program series, one during the summer and one after school, each serving approximately 100 children. Our successful implementation of two summer program sites in 2011 allowed us to leverage funding and support for the five-day-a-week after school program at three schools beginning spring 2012. In summer 2012, we will be expanding this initiative to enroll 120 students across Woodlawn.

The quality of the CDF Freedom Schools® program relies in part on our support and development of college-aged mentors and facilitators who are active participants in the children's experience. One of the most exciting aspects of our early work is the development of a quality youth program and staff development framework which integrates evidence-based practice and the contextual factors of the schools and the neighborhood. WCPC's full-time program staff have a range of skill sets and backgrounds, including school-based resource coordinators, social workers, educators, and youth development specialists. Overall, we aim to establish program initiatives which reflect the culture and community of our students. Thus we take great care to nurture practitioners and direct service providers to ensure our programs provide safe, structured activities which are culturally relevant and responsive to individual needs. We implement processes and collect data to inform our practice to ensure that we continuously improve our program infrastructure and support our program staff. Our successful Freedom Schools® program implementation to date is a testament of our capacity to cultivate and manage new initiatives and new program staff.

The scope and work of WCPC continues to grow and expand as we continue to demonstrate capacity to leverage resources and supports for Woodlawn youth and families. Serving as Lead Agency for the NRI program is a natural progression of our current programs and partnerships. WCPC will implement the NRI program design with fidelity and looks forward to participating in the technical assistance, training, networking, and evaluation activities made available through the Illinois Violence Prevention Authority (IVPA). WCPC recognizes IVPA's demonstrated track record to support and expand comprehensive efforts to promote public safety and public health; we look forward to a fruitful collaboration to ensure expanded supports for Woodlawn youth and families.

2. Woodlawn, located on Chicago's south side, has a population of 26,000, down from a high of 81,000 in 1960. As of 2000, Woodlawn's median household income was 47% of the city average. As of 2008, the percentage of Woodlawn children ages 0-5 receiving food stamps was 60%, against 37% for the city. There are 20 Chicago community areas in which 25% or more of young children in that community live in deep poverty (income below one-half of federal poverty level), and Woodlawn ranks 9th among them; 32% of children under age-6 in Woodlawn were living in deep poverty. In 2007 the rate of child abuse and neglect in Woodlawn per 1,000 young children was 17, compared to 9 for the city. Similarly, in 2008, Woodlawn's rate per 1,000 children ages 0-5 who were in the care of the Department of Children and Family Services was twice the rate for Chicago. According to the Chicago Police Department, Woodlawn averaged 363 violent crimes per square mile in 2009, more than twice as many as Chicago's 149. Also in 2009, there were 696 incidents of domestic violence in Woodlawn. Violence in and around Woodlawn schools, often gang-related, is a major concern: there were 62 violent crime incidents within a one-block radius of 7 Woodlawn schools in 2009; just this past weekend, three shootings (one of them fatal) took place within walking distance of three Woodlawn schools.

Academically, Woodlawn's children and schools are lagging behind comparative schools in the Chicago Public Schools (CPS) district. In 2010, Woodlawn schools served 3,676 elementary and 2,490 high school students. Eighty-seven percent of Woodlawn public school students are eligible for free lunch and 61 percent of Woodlawn children ages 0-17 live in poverty (Goerge et al. 2007, 39; 2005 figures).

In the 2010-2011 school year, six of the eight Woodlawn elementary schools with 8th grade students had ISAT scores in the "Exceeds" category in the single digits (below 5.4%). Only one school had 8th grade ISAT composite scores above 10% (excluding the charter school which takes a different assessment test. All figures from the CPS website). According to research conducted by the Consortium on Chicago School Research, 8th grade students must score well into the Exceeds Standards category in order to be on track for scoring well on the ACT—and thus on track to be prepared for college (Easton, Ponisciak and Luppescu 2008). Just 46% of adults in Woodlawn have a high school diploma or GED equivalency.

3. Should WCPC be selected to serve as Lead Agency for the NRI program, we will comply with all program requirements. We look forward to the opportunity to manage the Initiative and perform all Lead Agency functions as an extension of our current work. WCPC is uniquely positioned to ensure quality management of the project due to our organizational capacity, commitment to data-driven decision making, and connections to local and city-wide leadership. We will develop and maintain an Advisory Committee, ensuring that a broad range of stakeholders—from residents to service providers to youth to business and civic leaders—can provide input on the quality implementation of the Initiative and as well as contextualize Woodlawn-specific needs.

collaborate, and subcontract with partner organizations to deliver the mentoring, leadership, counseling, and reentry program components in a manner which aligns with our efforts and supports across sectors. Similar in spirit as to how our origin as a not-for-profit corporation came about through a series of community dialogues, we will convene our subcontracted partner organizations on a regular basis to ensure the progress of implementation and to maximize coordination of services and programs. Additionally, WCPC looks forward to participating in the technical assistance, training, networking, and evaluation activities provided by IVPA to promote quality, sustainable prevention and public safety efforts.

4. The strength of much of our work relies on our institutional and programmatic partnerships. The following organizations may provide assistance or serve as subcontracted vendors to implement the Program Components of the Neighborhood Recovery Initiative:

5. The full-time NRI Project Coordinator and part-time Fiscal Coordinator will work collaboratively with the WCPC's Executive Director, the Director for Programming, and the Family and Community Engagement Manager (to be hired, exclusive of the NRI program). The services provided through the NRI funding will primarily be targeted towards WCPC's work with Woodlawn older youth and the 2 Woodlawn high schools and will extend our capacity to provide integrated pathways through K-12 education and beyond.

WCPC's Executive Director will directly supervise the NRI Project Coordinator and Fiscal Coordinator. They will meet on a weekly basis to plan and problem solve around all aspects of the project's management, including fiscal management, reporting, evaluation and implementation. The NRI Project Coordinator will collaborate closely with WCPC's Program Director to ensure quality program implementation; collectively problem solve around implementation-oriented obstacles and challenges; and to ensure that WCPC-wide programming, communication, and outreach aligns wherever possible. The NRI Project Coordinator will also collaborate closely with WCPC's Family and Community Engagement Manager to ensure that NRI-sponsored parent development work aligns directly with the broader WCPC Family and Community engagement strategy. The NRI Project Coordinator will additionally work closely with both the WCPC Program Director and the WCPC Family and Community Engagement Manager to develop and maintain the broad-based Advisory Committee.

Since 2009, WCPC has demonstrated capacity and experience to nurture and sustain cross-school and neighborhood-wide program initiatives. Our experience in culturally relevant program design and implementation demonstrates our ability to design and manage intentional, sustained collaborations among individuals and organizational partnerships. The integration of the NRI program components in WCPC's comprehensive work will allow for effective and efficient service delivery, resulting in positive outcomes for Woodlawn youth and families.
