Hi,
FYI, I wanted to share this inquiry from CNN to CJIA about "the future of NRI" – and CJIA's proposed response, and make sure this reflects our stance on it going forward?
Cristin, the PIO, said she is running this past her directors also:

The Neighborhood Recovery Initiative will focus on providing mentoring, parent leadership, and re-entry. The grant application process is under way for the 22 community groups targeted for funding. We are working closely with these groups and the Governor's Office to create programs that meet our goals of reducing deviant behaviors associated with risk factors, facilitating social skills, and strengthening parent leadership within the communities.

Hi MIke,

CNN e-mailed today (see below).

I am confirming with our directors that this is where we are right now in planning:

The Neighborhood Recovery Initiative will focus on providing mentoring, parent leadership, and re-entry. The grant application process is under way for the 22 community groups targeted for funding. We are working closely with these groups and the Governor's Office to create programs that meet our goals of reducing deviant behaviors associated with risk factors, facilitating social skills, and strengthening parent leadership within the communities.

What's up on your end with CNN? What do you think of this statement?

I am out of the office today, checking e-mail. Can be reached at [redacted] Thanks,

Hi Cristin

I wanted to know about the future of the NRI program. I know that when we last spoke things were not defined.
Since it' been a couple of weeks, I wanted to touch base and see if anything had changed. Is this something maybe Mike Claffey can help us with given you're not in today?

Thanks for the help

Hi Cristin, good morning

I wanted to touch base with you briefly today with one quick question
Will you let me know when it would be a good time for a call today?

Thank you
