

STATE OF ILLINOIS
PRISONER REVIEW BOARD

Governor: JB PRITZKER
Chairman: Edith L. Crigler

46TH ANNUAL REPORT

January 1 to December 31, 2022

LETTER FROM THE CHAIR

STATE OF ILLINOIS
JB PRITZKER, GOVERNOR

PRISONER REVIEW BOARD

Edith L. Crigler, Chair

The Honorable JB Pritzker
Office of the Governor
207 Statehouse
Springfield, IL 62706

Dear Governor Pritzker:

The Illinois Prisoner Review Board is pleased to submit its forty-sixth annual report, summarizing the Board's operations throughout calendar year 2022.

The Board serves four primary missions: (1) bipartisan, independent review, adjudication, and enforcement of behavioral rules for offenders; (2) parole consideration reviews and decisions for all adult offenders with "indeterminate" sentences; (3) hearings and confidential reports and recommendations to the Governor regarding all requests for executive clemency; (4) protection and consideration of the rights and concerns of victims when making decisions or recommendations regarding parole, executive clemency, conditions of release, or revocation of parole or release.

The Board worked diligently to refine policies and procedures and continued ongoing efforts to digitize paper processes and Board operations. All steps in the right direction to make the Board run more efficiently and effectively.

January of 2022 brought the enactment of the Joe Coleman Medical Release Act. This act provides another means for seriously ill men and women in the Department of Corrections to be considered by the Board for release on parole or Mandatory Supervised Release. The Board conducted 78 Joe Coleman Hearings in 2022.

The Board also worked with thousands of other parties to conduct over 23,000 hearings for the people of the State of Illinois including over 1,100 Executive Clemency Hearings and over 4,700 Final Revocation Hearings. In many categories, these numbers continue to rise annually.

As always, the Board remains steadfast in its dedication to the law enforcement goals of the State, and we will continue to seek to further refine and improve the release supervision system in Illinois.

Sincerely,

Edith Crigler
Chair

INTRODUCTION

Prior to February 1, 1978, the Illinois Prisoner Review Board (“the Board”) was a division of the Illinois Department of Corrections (“IDOC”) known as the Parole and Pardon Board. Today the Board is a quasi-judicial entity that makes decisions concerning adult and juvenile prison inmate matters. By statute it is currently composed of 15 Members who are appointed by the Governor, with the approval of the State Senate.

While the number of classic parole cases has decreased in recent years, today the greater part of the Board’s time is employed in holding parole revocation hearings, consisting of technical and new sentence revocations. These hearings are held at the various penal institutions around the state. The hearings can be complex fact-finding affairs involving attorneys on both sides of the questions, witness testimony, cross-examinations, and volumes of documentary evidence.

These kinds of hearings and reviews are with juvenile and adult institutions, and are at the heart of the Board’s duties. On any given month, the Board will conduct hearings with all institutions, sometimes twice a month.

Executive Clemency

Perhaps the most visible work the Board does involves executive clemency proceedings, which occur four times a year. Three times in Chicago and once in Springfield the Board convenes to hear petitions from individuals seeking Clemency in the form of a Pardon, an Expungement, a Commutation or some other form of relief from the Governor.

Confidential Recommendations are made to the Governor after these hearings are held and they are sent to his office for a final determination. Most petitioners request public hearings, but the Board also reviews petitions without a public hearing if the petitioner so chooses.

Victim Notification

One of the Board’s other historically significant mandates has been to provide victim notification services. The Board has a specialized Victim Notification Unit (“VNU”) that documents the names and addresses of persons who request to be included in its registry.

The VNU is devoted to alerting victims and their families of the impending release of an individual in custody from IDOC.

By allowing the victims to be involved in the process, it is the Board’s intention to assist them in experiencing less frustration with the criminal justice system. Victims and their loved ones call, write, email or very often meet with Board members to register their opposition to parole or to request special conditions of parole. This is all coordinated by a small, dedicated staff that compose the VNU and the Operations Unit. Board members and staff work closely with victim advocates and state’s attorneys throughout Illinois to coordinate efforts to protect the rights of crime victims.

The Board also convenes daily/ weekly to deliberate and prepare orders which enumerate the conditions that an individual in custody shall abide by while on parole/ mandatory supervised release. In an average month, the Board will issue approximately 929 orders for individuals in custody who are due to be placed on mandatory supervised release pursuant to law.

C-Number Hearings

Before 1978, one of the Board's primary mandates was to hold parole eligibility hearings for individuals in custody whose sentences were of indeterminate durations. After that date, when determinate (flat) sentences were legislated in Illinois, the number of classic parole hearings for what have become known as C-number individuals, was fixed at a group of approximately 16,500 inmates, a number that has been whittled down to approximately 75 in the course of the years. These hearings continue to be held across the State and constitute the Board's most contested and deliberated hearings. The Board monthly at its Springfield headquarters to thoroughly discuss and vote on these special cases.

Other Hearings

The Board also reviews IDOC's recommendations for revocation of individual in custody's good conduct credits when there has been an alleged violation of institutional rules. The Board provides a hearing to permit an individual in custody to make a defense against the allegation, before deciding whether to revoke these credits.

Joe Coleman Act

The Joe Coleman Act was enacted on January 1, 2022. This Act gives the Board the sole discretion to grant medical release. A grant of medical release under this Act shall be an act of executive and legislative grace and shall be at the sole discretion of the Prisoner Review Board.

Juvenile Hearings

Finally, the Board carries out specialized juvenile parole hearings at eight juvenile institutions each month under provisions of the Juvenile Court Act. These hearings mirror the adult hearings described above, but are conducted pursuant to different laws than those observed in the adult hearings.

Recidivism

With the State confronting a recidivism rate of approximately 36.7%¹, the reintegration of individuals back into society from incarceration is challenging. Presently, there is an emerging belief that the larger price is being borne by society, since the practical barriers facing people with criminal records make it more likely that they will slip back into a life of crime if not effectively addressed.

One of the overwhelming requests to the Board on clemency issues is that persons with convictions cannot get jobs. Many employers refuse to give jobs to convicted persons because they don't trust convicted persons, are afraid of lawsuits on negligent hiring, insurance companies, and, in some cases, are prohibited by law from hiring convicted persons. However, the lack of jobs is compounding the problem. Persons who have been convicted, after they have finished their time, are returning back to community only to find they can no longer find employment. This inability to earn a living too often results in a reliance upon Public Aid or a return to a life of crime in order to survive.

In order to break the cycle of recidivism, we must aid convicted persons in becoming law-abiding citizens. By introducing rehabilitation programs which specifically aid those who have served their debt to society, this goal can be attained.
