ILLINOIS HUMAN TRAFFICKING TASK FORCE REPORT

July 2018

Governor Bruce Rauner
House Speaker Michael Madigan
Senate President John Cullerton

Attached is the final report of the Joint Task Force on Human Trafficking required per Public Act 099-0864 of the 100th General Assembly.

The Illinois Human Trafficking Taskforce report is the result of months of research and statewide meetings in collaboration with individuals across a broad cross-section of public sector agencies charged with addressing isolated aspects of human trafficking. This collaboration allowed the task force to put together a more complete picture of the size and scope of the problem of human trafficking, complete with recommendations for a more comprehensive approach to effectively combat this crisis. It has been developed with stakeholder and survivor input gathered from public comments taken at several hearings conducted throughout the state. We would like to offer special thanks to Char Rivette, chair of the Education and Awareness Committee; Pilar Dunning, chair of the Health and Human Services Committee; and Judge McGraw, chair of the Law Enforcement Subcommittee.

These recommendations are a product of the subcommittees and may not totally reflect the opinions of the legislative members of the task force. However, the task force urges the General Assembly to consider carefully the recommendations of the Human Trafficking Task Force, with sufficient resources to make the recommended changes. The implementation of these recommendations will require continuous analysis by the appropriate standing committees of the House and Senate assigned to oversee these issues. This report includes a comprehensive resource manual which lists the services available to human trafficked persons in Illinois. It is our hope that this report provides valuable information from anti-human trafficking stakeholders to inform you in your deliberations on this important matter.

The legislative members of the task force are appreciative of the work that was done to complete this report.

Respectfully submitted,

Members of the Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force

Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force

Executive Summary

The State of Illinois ranks eleventh in the nation for the number of cases of Human Trafficking<sup>1</sup>. Awareness of human trafficking has grown in recent years, both locally and nationally. Because of this ranking, concern for an effective approach to combat this phenomenon has been embraced by the General Assembly. The Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force was mobilized to make specific recommendations.

It has been recognized that there are significant gaps in developing methods of positively impacting this problem. There is inconsistency in understanding the problem and how to intervene and measure effectiveness. Three subcommittees were formed and charged to coalesce around each area: education and awareness, health and human services, and law enforcement. Task Force recommendations have been set forth in each of these three areas. It is vital that programs and services in each of the three areas collaborate, coordinate, and integrate the provision of services for this population.

The literature and testimony indicate significant shortcomings in available data. Furthermore, data collection and reporting formats differ. The lack of uniformity can negatively impact the quality and validity of data. This makes it difficult to accurately determine needs. Such changes will make a positive difference in the lives of the vulnerable individuals affected.

The term “human trafficking” encompasses both sex and labor trafficking. The Task Force subcommittees made specific recommendations that promote the well-being of victims and survivors of both sex and labor trafficking.

The Task Force’s overarching goal was to study the human trafficking problem in Illinois and hold hearings in furtherance of:

1. Develop a State plan to address human trafficking
2. Implement a system for the sharing of human trafficking data between government agencies
3. Establish policies that enable State government to work with nongovernmental organizations to prevent human trafficking and provide assistance to victims of human trafficking
4. Evaluate various approaches used by state and local governments to increase public awareness of human trafficking
5. Develop methods for protecting the rights of victims of human trafficking
6. Evaluate the necessity of treating victims of human trafficking as crime victims rather than criminals
7. Develop methods for promoting the safety of victims of human trafficking

The Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force was composed of twelve Illinois State legislators and one representative from the Illinois State Police. Below are the dates, times and locations of where the hearings were held:

1. Monday, June 19th, 2017
2:00 pm – 4:00 pm
Room C-600 6th Floor
Michael C. Bilandic Building

5. Wednesday, December 6th, 2017
11:00 am to 1:00 pm
Michael C. Bilandic Building
160 N. LaSalle Street, Chicago, IL 60601
Room C-600, 6th Floor

As a result of the Illinois Human Trafficking Taskforce hearings, three topic specific subcommittees were developed; Education and Awareness, Health and Human Services and Law Enforcement.

The Human Trafficking Problem in Illinois

A 14-year-old teen lives in a rural town in Illinois and works after school to help support her family. When she is not working, she spends a great deal of time on social media. She is unable to focus solely on school work because her parents cannot support their large family of six. Her younger brother and sister look to her as a parental figure. On the internet, she meets a young man and she agrees to meet him one day after school. Like many of her peers, online dating and communication is common. He told her he could offer her a good job in the next city over. After visiting each other a few times, exchanging gifts, and constant communication she felt like she had found someone that she could relate to. He would pick her up every day after school, and none of the teachers asked questions about where she was going.

The two spent a great deal of time together chatting on and offline. The two began sending one another compromising photos. The young man befriended her and worked to earn her trust but after about six months, the relationship began to change. At first, she would answer calls and let him know who called and where they were needing services. As the weeks went by he bought her new clothes, tennis shoes, and a backpack. Then one day, he asked her to sell drugs for him. She was hesitant, but he threatened that if she did not do the exchange, he would stop seeing her. She gave in and completed the task and reported back to him. He was unamused and told her that she had to take the bus home today. She was confused and wanted to do better next time. He picked her up the next day and had another task for her. She was forced, under threat, to have sex with men who paid money to him. Even though his actions were not yet violent, she realized that she had been deceived and she was trapped.

Why a Focus on Human Trafficking?

Stories like these are common in communities around Illinois and across the country. Many well-intentioned, young people fall prey to human trafficking for financial and social reasons. While the story describes a child, the faces of human trafficking vary because human trafficking occurs in a multitude of venues and industries.

According to a 2018 Human Trafficking Statistical Summary published by the University of Illinois at Chicago Jane Adams School of Social Work, the top venues for sex trafficking in Illinois were hotels, residence-based commercial sex, illicit massage businesses, escort services, and online ads. The top venues for labor trafficking were traveling sales crews, domestic work, agriculture, retail, and begging rings. Between December 2007 and December 2017, 1,148 human trafficking cases, consisting of 2,832 identified trafficked persons and survivors in Illinois, were reported to the National Human Trafficking Hotline<sup>1</sup>.

HUMAN TRAFFICKING IS THE ACT OF RECRUITING, HARBORING, MOVING, OR OBTAINING A PERSON BY FORCE, FRAUD OR COERCION, FOR THE PURPOSE OF INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE, DEBT BONDAGE OR SEXUAL EXPLOITATION

- Trafficking Victims Protection Act (2000)

While awareness of human trafficking has grown throughout the world, it has only recently become an area of more significant concern in Illinois in the past 10 years. Human Trafficking is known to be an illegal multi-billion dollar industry world-wide.

From January 1 to December 31, 2017 there were 193 identified cases of human trafficking in Illinois reported to the National Human Trafficking Hotline. Because perpetrators often traffick multiple individuals, of those 193 cases, there were a total of 552 trafficked persons and survivors involved<sup>1</sup>. In order to gain a greater understanding of statewide efforts underway, as well as the greatest need and priorities requiring immediate attention, a closer look at whom, what, and how this can happen is definitely warranted. The current fragmentation and need for more coordinated and collaborative approaches merit further investigation. This is a multifaceted problem; therefore, the need for a multifaceted approach to impact this problem cannot be overstated.

The term “human trafficking” can mean many different things and typically comprises both sex and labor trafficking. Of the 193 human trafficking cases identified in Illinois in 2017, 150 involved sex trafficking, 26 were cases of labor trafficking, 10 cases of sex and labor, and 7 unspecified cases. Trafficking can happen to anyone, without regard for gender, sexual orientation, socioeconomic class, or race. Despite this, the risk factors (e.g. recent migration/relocation, substance abuse, runaway/homeless youth, mental health concerns, involvement in child welfare system) for some demographic groups are higher than those of other groups.

Traffickers can consist of pimps, family members, peers, and “significant others”. Traffickers often recruit those who are emotionally and financially vulnerable, making them easier to fool and manipulate. They often recruit by offering the basic means of survival, like food, shelter, money or offering a “loving presence”. The drive to have basic needs met lead to engaging in high risk behaviors that also resort into a cycle of homelessness, incarceration, and drug addiction.

This cycle of dominance used by traffickers mirrors the cycle of violence in domestic violence relationships. Both instances involve a dangerous cycle of manipulation and control through emotional and physical abuse. The domestic violence movement began in the 1980s. That movement resulted in very effective advocacy, and the expanded use of education and awareness approaches. From this groundswell, there are now federal and state legislation, policies, procedures, a data collection system and best practices for prevention and intervention. Human Trafficking prevention and awareness must follow a similar path as the evolution of domestic violence advocacy, policy, practice and interventions to increase the availability of resources, services, and legislative action.

We are now at a critical juncture for action that will continue the momentum that the Task Force has begun. This action will result in a change in the exploitation of trafficked persons. Each task force subcommittee focused on producing recommendations that will drive the current momentum onto a path of better outcomes for trafficked victims, specific to their areas of expertise. In addition, each subcommittee prioritized survivor centered care, trauma-informed care, best practices according to research, and collaboration as guiding principles for this report.

Recommendations

Education and Awareness

Introduction

Everyone has a role to play in combatting human trafficking. Recognizing the signs is the first in identifying and providing support to trafficked persons. Education and training should be focused and include information on:

a) The fact that human trafficking exists in their industry and what constitutes human trafficking

b) Ways to recognize if it's happening

c) What to do if they suspect a person is being trafficked

Despite human trafficking being a substantial problem in the state of Illinois, Illinois citizens largely denied that the human rights issue is a relevant concern. According to an April 2017 Simon Poll from the Paul Simon Public Policy Institute at Southern Illinois University Carbondale, 51 percent of voters surveyed disagreed or strongly disagreed that sex trafficking affected their area. Only 28 percent of voters surveyed reported that it does.<sup>2</sup>

Anti-Human Trafficking advocates believe that communities are not aware of the different ways human trafficking can exist. The average person may only associate human trafficking with other countries or the stereotypically pimp image with a fur coat.

The members of the subcommittee on Education and Awareness met three times (March 12, April 9, and April 30) to review and discuss recommendations on how to improve education and awareness on the issue of human trafficking in Illinois. The subcommittee was chaired by Char Rivette, Executive Director of Chicago Children's Advocacy Center, and chair of the Illinois Children's Justice Task Force. The members consisted of experts around the state who provide services to trafficked persons, who advocate legally and socially on behalf of trafficked persons, and who engage in education and awareness activities for trafficking as well as sexual assault and child abuse.

Education should include various modalities such as a webinar, a website to access, and printed materials. A hotline number should be created/provided in all materials. Materials should be posted in various locations where individuals at risk for being trafficked and interveners would have access. Identifying and reporting signs of human trafficking may assist law enforcement in providing assistance to survivors and prosecuting perpetrators. Allies can be most helpful when they contact law enforcement. Law enforcement is then responsible for investigations.

Only
of voters agreed
that sex trafficking
affects their area

- Simon Poll released

Recommendations

1. Create the Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force with seed money for at least three years.

Currently, the Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Family Services, has taken on this role in a non-official capacity. Since they have already initiated said taskforce, although unfunded and without state authority, it is recommended that they be given the authority to act officially in this capacity. We recommend that funding and oversight of the task force be allocated to the Attorney General's Office and should have some authority and responsibility to inform the Governor and General Assembly of the activities of the state. They should form a connective body with all the local task forces in the state. The Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force shall also have the responsibility of organizing and implementing the education and awareness activities and strategies outlined in this document. They will also have the responsibility for creating an informative website with all the local task force information, information on relevant and accurate resources, and information on organizations that provide education, awareness, and services regarding human trafficking. Throughout the nation, there is a lack of comprehensive data that provides accurate insight into the scope of human trafficking. This includes information pertaining to rescues and convictions, services to trafficked persons/ survivors, and other useful information. To better define the issue in the state of Illinois, there must be a concerted effort to develop a system of accurately collecting and storing data as well as increased research projects to inform prevention, intervention, and policymaking on human trafficking. The Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force shall also be the conduit to other states' initiatives as well as federal initiatives, and will drive policy statewide.

a. Compose a list of relevant and accurate local and national sites for data and resources and keep this list current on a searchable website. Attached is a list composed by the Subcommittee. See Appendix A b. Coordinate the work of local task forces within the state, ensuring consistency, providing technical assistance, and identifying gaps and redundancies. Attached is a list of the locally-run human trafficking task forces composed by the Subcommittee. See Appendix A c. Track and keep current a list of existing organizations that conduct education and/ or awareness about human trafficking, with information about catchment area, capacity and audiences. Attached is a table created by the Subcommittee Members. See Appendix A d. Create standards for organizations which provide education, awareness, and services to trafficked persons, including standards that address common human trafficking stereotypes, the use of responsible statistics, the use of imagery in presentations, and the use of survivor stories when conducting training.

e. Work within the guidelines outlined by Polaris (<https://polarisproject.org/>) which is a nationally recognized collective of knowledge and best practice in the field of human trafficking.

f. Create the education and training materials (as indicated below), using members of the education and awareness subcommittee as advisors.

2. Focus education and training efforts on potential allies (i.e. hospital staff, social workers, teachers, law enforcement, public transit workers) and industries rather than generalized awareness.

As mentioned earlier, industries in which trafficked persons are most commonly exploited include domestic work, agriculture, retail/small business hospitality, massage parlors and spas, begging, escort services, and via online ads.

The Polaris Project has compiled a report on the 25 types of human trafficking. Therefore, the Subcommittee recommends focusing on education and awareness of those areas that are listed in the study.

Additionally, the Subcommittee identified that individuals who are most vulnerable are undocumented immigrant populations, youth in care, individuals with histories of sexual abuse, and other vulnerable populations. The following allies were identified as being prioritized for focusing on education initiatives: law enforcement, school personnel, health-care providers, child welfare staff, child care providers, residential staff, foster parents, and all those classified as mandated reporters under Illinois Abused and Neglected Child Reporting Act (ANCRA).

The Subcommittee identified other potential allies who interact frequently with industries within which human trafficking occurs. Examples include: hotel staff, emergency personnel, transit workers, plumbers, electricians, food and alcohol distributors, inspectors, licensing bodies, the trucking industry, OSHA, and the Department of Labor.

Education on human trafficking should be added to existing required training curricula wherever possible and relevant for mandated reporters, law enforcement, mental health professionals, teachers, medical professionals, and others working with vulnerable youth and adult populations. This includes inclusion of this topic in foundation training for DCFS workers, child welfare workers, such as foster parent training.

Education materials should be created and offered in a webinar and printed materials.

4. Enact Legislative Changes to Increase Education and #### Awareness of Human Trafficking.

Review any and all current legislation which requires education and training on reporting, responding to, or intervening with, sex crimes, child abuse, or sexual health and make amendments to include human trafficking as relevant (e.g., Erin's law, mandated reporter training, etc.)

Create legislation that state business licensure requirements include the creation of codes of conduct, policy and awareness training on labor and sex trafficking. This would include posting awareness materials, and creating policy on identification and reporting trafficking.

Require awareness training for state health inspectors, OSHA, Department of Labor, licensing inspectors, and other relevant government regulators, on signs of human trafficking in the relevant industries (restaurants, hotels, construction, and agriculture) and how to respond if they suspect trafficking.

Require residential facilities to participate in education and awareness of human trafficking as a requirement for licensure.

Health and Human Services

Introduction

Recognizing a trafficked person in public spaces are often difficult to do.

Healthcare providers and those in the housing industry may have a direct link to trafficked persons.

Despite the increased attention from law enforcement, this committee recognizes the need for more shelter and medical attention for trafficked persons.

Illinois is one of 32 states with the highest ranking for adoption of broad human trafficking legislation <sup>5</sup>

The Health and Human Services Subcommittee met three times on March 9, April 9, and May 7, 2018 to discuss their recommendations for the Human Trafficking Taskforce. Meetings were facilitated by Program Consultant for Salvation Army, Pilar Meyer Dunning and included participants from various organizations geared toward combating human trafficking, sexual assault, and child abuse in the State of Illinois.

Recommendations

1. Appoint a diverse set of sex and labor trafficking survivors to an Illinois Advisory Council on Human Trafficking, mirroring the US Advisory Council on Human Trafficking that was established in 2015.

This formal platform for trafficking survivors would provide opportunities for those with lived experiences to advise, provide insight, and make recommendations on any human trafficking specific policies and programs that are implemented by the state.

2. Recommend state-wide housing options to provide immediate, temporary, short-term, and long-term housing to address the needs of the following subset populations of human trafficking survivors:

- Foreign-born
- Domestic
- Minors
- Adults
- Adults with Children
- Female
- Male
- Transgender
- Substance abuse concerns

3. Add protections for survivors of human trafficking within the name change process for the State of Illinois.

Recommend looking at the laws in California that allow names to be changed without publishing in the newspaper under domestic violence and human trafficking protections.

4. Amend the domestic violence act to allow human trafficking specific residential programs to have the same protection as domestic violence shelters in being a confidential location.

5. Recommend access to obtaining an ID without permanent address, and/or using an agency address for human trafficking survivors.

6. Implement a program similar to Safe at Home in California, which provides a free P.O. Box and mail forwarding service to protect survivors of domestic violence and human trafficking from being found by potential perpetrators.

This address would be accepted by state, county and city government agencies in lieu of a traditional residential or other mailing address where the trafficked person can be tracked down.

7. Recommend the expansion of public benefits to include dental care and eye care for survivors of human trafficking. As part of this recommendation to continue the Survivor Support and Trafficking Prevention Act that is expiring in 2019.

8. Recommend state-wide training to inform staff and citizens about policy changes related to the following: DHS and public benefits, ID access, name change access, housing access.

9. Create, maintain, and provide financial support for a resource list or database of trafficking-specific service providers to provide resources after a potential survivor has been identified.

10. Recommend service and medical providers ### servicing human trafficking survivors receive training to provide comprehensive trauma-informed care and identification of trafficked persons.

- a. Substance abuse training and identification
- b. Statewide training conferences for human trafficking service providers and medical personnel
- c. Select location for database to be housed (i.e. public health, DHS, law enforcement entity)
- d. Create database of providers who have received adequate training in trauma informed care
- e. Provide resources for agencies to receive training or funding to train staff
- f. Develop institutional protocols for dealing with trafficked persons, such as hospitals, clinics, etc.

11. Recommend a Statewide plan for collecting data of people served through domestic violence and trafficking-specific programs to better understand the capacity of programs to provide housing and support to survivors.

Database to include de-identified information, non-duplicated statistics, and information about accessing the program. A mechanism for sharing information without double counting the numbers of individuals who have accessed resources from a number of participating partners will be explored.

Programs listed in this database have been vetted and have received required training.

Law Enforcement

Introduction

In an effort to improve the administration of justice, the Law Enforcement Subcommittee of the Illinois Human Trafficking Task Force, chaired by the Honorable Joseph G. McGraw of the 17th Judicial Circuit Court. Two subcommittee meetings were held; one in Rockford, Illinois and one in Chicago, Illinois. Attendees included law enforcement officials from the Cook County Sheriff's Office, Illinois State Police, Rockford Police Department and the Winnebago County Sheriff's Office. Prosecutors from the Cook County State's Attorney's Office, DuPage County State's Attorney's Office and Winnebago County State's Attorney's Office were also in attendance. Juvenile probation personnel and service providers in the Chicago region were invited to attend.

The goal of each meeting was to identify law enforcement strategies that require legislative assistance, changes to existing laws, or the enhancement of resources to respond to human trafficking. Each agency was asked to identify what the agency perceived the problems to be in responding to human trafficking and why; what strategies the agency has utilized (including what worked and what did not work); and any roadblocks the agency encounters when responding to this issue.

Discussions primarily focused on responding to sex trafficking of adults and minors. Each attendee made it clear that they are not lobbying for any legislation. Rather, the goal of each attendee was to provide information about their current response and what tools would be useful in an improved response.

Recommendations for Law Enforcement Response

Law enforcement indicated that sex trafficking is both online and on the street, and both require different interventions. Addressing the issue can be difficult, because law enforcement desires to prioritize the needs of trafficked persons and offer services. However, law enforcement must also balance the desires of the public for this to not be on the street, near their homes or businesses. Public Service

Announcements might aid in this; it is hard to educate the public on this issue.

1. Consistency in enforcement

A major challenge that some law enforcement agencies face is staffing. Currently, law enforcement in Rockford is only able to commit to this issue on a limited basis. When resources were available to tackle this issue, they were able to secure statements from the trafficked women and were able to arrest the traffickers. Because funding has been cut, tactical efforts by law enforcement have been diminished, limiting its effectiveness.

The Cook County Sheriff's Department notes that they can work on long-term vice operations regarding both suppression and end demand triage, and are able to look at the supply side in the sense of who is supplying. It was noted that many other jurisdictions are not able to look at who is supplying the individuals.

2. Increase availability of services for those that are high risk, not just those that disclose, and available beyond court-involvement, with an option for survivor-led services, and there should be increased availability of survivor-led services.

The Cook County Sheriff's Department works to provide aid to sex-workers. The law enforcement response considers the specific needs of individuals who have experienced trafficking. Specifically, law enforcement agents try to identify factors causing someone to be involved “in the life” and to assist them in getting out of the life. There have not been many arrests for prostitution. Law Enforcement noted that many individuals do not realize that they have been trafficked, and that their intervention allows for a “time out” that will allow a person a moment to begin thinking about an exit.

Advocates recommended that services should be provided in a trauma-informed and survivor-centered way.

Services should also be available to those that are at high risk of being trafficked not just those that disclose.

There are validated assessments that can show risk level. There are not many validated screeners available. However, validated screeners, meaning that they measure what they purport to measure, have been created by both the VERA Institute of Justice and by the DC Family Courts. The human trafficking screener created by VERA Institute of Justice does not have a “scoring system” and it does not confirm that an individual has been trafficked. Per the screener: “The totality of the responses, and not any single answer, will help you decide if someone is likely a trafficked person under the law.” Therefore, state trial courts, DCFS and law enforcement will need access to service providers and programs for those who are identified as being high risk of being trafficked, and not just for the individuals that are identified. Housing options for adults also need to expand. Domestic violence shelters are a common option, but there are gaps that exist with this service as well. For some shelters, if a trafficked person does not identify their trafficker as their “boyfriend” or a “significant other,” they will not be admitted. Many times, the relationship is not identified in a traditional way. It is important that housing and placement options exist for those that are at high-risk of, or otherwise identified as being trafficked.

Another barrier to accessing services is that many services “dry up” when the recipient reaches the age of 18. Though youth can be court-involved until the age of 21, specialized care is required beyond the date of court-involvement.

86%
of voters agreed
that training for law enforcement on human trafficking should be required by law.
- Simon Poll released
April 24, 2017<sup>2</sup>

3. Designate resources for the development of local Multidisciplinary Teams.

National best practices indicate that a regional multidisciplinary team should be enacted to develop a collective strategy.

The Cook County Task Force was enacted in 2010. The Cook County Task Force Law Enforcement Working Group is different from traditional task force models, where one law enforcement agency is “in a command” position. Here, all agencies are collaborative partners, with no agency commanding the actions of another. The state and federal prosecutors chair the meeting to assure open information sharing among partner agencies. The agencies all work together, share information, are flexible, and there is no competition. The prosecutors also ensure that service providers are part of the law enforcement and criminal justice process, because a multidisciplinary approach serves both trafficked persons and the cases which seek justice on their behalf. This model has proven to foster trust between law enforcement and service providers. It is important that the “leadership” of the task force is not a person, as people change, but rather it be institutionalized as a team of partner agencies. The coordinator at the Cook County Task Force is funded by a Federal grant.

One prosecutor noted that a strategy to move from the streets to the courts to services is needed. He noted that training for law enforcement and establishment of problem-solving courts would be impactful.

Recommendations for Law Enforcement Response to Youth

1. Educate those in foster care and in schools (i.e. administrators, students, resource officers, nurses, coaches, teachers, mandated reporters, counselors, social workers)

The FBI has indicated that the average age of entry into prostitution is between 12-14 years old. Education to youth on this topic is important.

Most trafficked persons’ story starts with a relationship. There needs to be discussions about healthy and unhealthy relationships with youth, and most schools do not offer a curriculum on “healthy relationships.” Education should highlight the signs, risks and issues of trafficking of minors. Human trafficking prevention curricula exists, for example “Deceptions” and “I am Little Red,” but gaining the school’s permission to present these programs can be difficult.

The Cook County Task Force gained some access to Chicago schools through the training of fifty school nurses on this topic. However, not every school has a school nurse. To ensure programming is implemented, sex trafficking prevention curricula could be mandated for middle school and high school students. Mandated education for schools should be enforceable.

School Resource Officers, nurses, teachers, coaches, and mandated reporters should also receive this training. Because Adverse Childhood Experiences Study (ACES) is a big topic with educators, it might make sense to also add a point about trafficking and healthy relationships in with ACES training.

Education in schools and hospitals is needed, as well as training to assist in identifying trafficked individuals.

2. Create specialized placement options for high-risk youth that are both secure and trauma-informed.

The Cook County Child Protection Response Unit, a division of the Cook County Sheriff’s Police Department, investigates and attempts to locate children who have disappeared or run away, and gathers general information from youth that appear at the shelter. The FBI has provided a statistic that within 24-48 hours of running away, one in three youth will be approached by a pimp/trafficker. The Child Protection Response Unit views their role as crucial in recovering youth.

It is important to note that when youth are “on the run,” they are running from somewhere. Specialized placement options, apart from traditional DCFS foster care or group homes, need to be developed. If youth are running from these placements, an alternative needs to be developed. We need to secure a safe place instead of returning runaway youth to the environment which put them at risk.

The Law Enforcement Subcommittee stressed the importance of specialized placements for youth that treat trauma; one that is secured and trauma-informed. Placement needs to be able to treat specific trauma, understand what trauma looks like, and how trauma can manifest. Counseling services by counselors that understand the pathways to trafficking need to be made available. Relationship counseling is needed. Transferable skills must be taught to these youth.

Illinois DCFS asserted that in January of 2017, a work group report regarding Senate Bill 1763 was drafted. The report concluded that yes, youth require specialized services and a locked facility. Senate Bill 2461 called for specialized placement or in-home protective custody. It was noted that law enforcement can take protective custody over a youth for up to 48 hours, but that DCFS does not have a similar tool available.

Detention cannot be the default answer to placement and housing simply because we do not have a more appropriate and effective alternative.

There was a discussion about what “secured” means. It does not necessarily have to mean that the doors are locked, but it should mean that the youth is not able to readily leave and get back into the same life. It could mean that the youth is removed from that neighborhood. For example, the Phoenix House New York provides drug and alcohol treatment, and it does not have any fences or bars, but is far from the city and keeps attendees “out of the environment.”

It was specifically noted that all involved should keep in mind that a rape survivor will likely have a better understanding of their trauma than a trafficked person.

A trafficked person may not understand their trauma.

Illinois DCFS noted that currently there are not any in-state placement options that will address the needs. In order to send a child out-of-state, the court may require “rigorous justification.”

It was noted that most facilities require the individual to admit to being trafficked. However, at the early stage of recovery, the individual may not be identifying as a trafficked person. This is a significant barrier to obtaining placement.

3. Implement validated risk assessment tool to facilitate interagency communication.

Youth that are involved with juvenile probation in Cook County can be referred to Dr. Kisha Roberts-Tabb, of the Cook County Probation Department, for a commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) risk measurement. Though she is not able to screen all youth, as she is the only screener, she is able to take referrals from judges, juvenile detention, juvenile probation, and prosecutors. The intake officers at the Detention Center are also trained on identifiers, and can flag a case for interview by Dr. Roberts-Tabb. She is usually able to conduct interviews within 24-48 hours.

Dr. Roberts-Tabb utilizes a screening tool adapted from one used in Denver for measurement of risk of CSEC. Denver developed their screening tool based upon an approach to “at-risk youth” developed in the Dallas Police Department. Applying the Cook County version of the screening tool, if three identifiers are present, Dr. Roberts-Tabb will indicate that individual is at high-risk for CSEC.

However, if there are less than three identifiers, but other red flags, she can indicate the youth is high-risk. A quantifiable score is not generated, but Dr. Roberts-Tabb creates a narrative based on the interview, and will also draft service recommendations. The report is then submitted to the court.

It was noted that in Denver, the Detention Center utilizes the screener at the first point of contact, regardless of offense.

The 17th Circuit Court, in Winnebago County, has also begun to use a CSEC Screener at the first point of contact, at their Juvenile Assessment Center. Winnebago County utilizes the Sex Trafficking Assessment

Review (STAR), a validated tool developed by the DC Family Courts. It generates a quantifiable score which is easily communicated between agencies and departments. For example, a numerical score identifies the youth as either low, moderate or high-risk of CSEC. It will help to identify those youth that may require additional or specialized interventions.

Recommendations for Court Response

1. Recognize that trafficked persons (confirmed and unconfirmed) will no doubt intersect the legal system.

State trial courts and their juvenile and adult probation departments will need access to service providers and programs for those that are at high-risk of being trafficked, and not just for the individuals that are confirmed.

To assist in the administration of justice, the court system will also need safe placement options for high-risk or confirmed youth, training for foster families, and specialized homes to place youth who are at high-risk for CSEC.

2. Grant availability for advocates to be available in specialized court calls - to be available for “staffing” and assist in providing case management.

In Cook County, all misdemeanor charges of prostitution are sent to one courtroom with trained staff. At that call, service providers like Haymarket and Salvation Army’s STOP-IT program are available. Individuals are not identified as being trafficked, but do get linked to appropriate services. Case workers are present and needs are determined. There is no end date to the program unless it is clear that an individual is not interested. Goals are set by the participant in conjunction with their case worker, and can include acquiring an identification card, a cell phone, or applying for LINK services. The program is open to an individual as many times as the individual would like. If a participant comes in on a non-court day, but has completed his or her goals, the court can be opened to “graduate” the participant and dismiss the charge. Expungement and sealing is recommended, but does not occur in that courtroom. It was noted that this court does have a very heavy warrant call, and it is difficult to keep individuals engaged.

An intervention for adults, the PATH Court, has been created in Winnebago County. In this courtroom model, courtroom staff, including the Assistant State's Attorney and Public Defender, engage in training to understand human trafficking. The model presents an opportunity for those charged with prostitution to engage with service providers. An advocate from Rockford Alliance Against Sexual Exploitation is present to speak to each attendee. It is a seed-planting court, so that when the participant is ready to seek change, s/he knows where s/he can go. The hope is that one day it can be a Problem-Solving Court.

3. Expand the availability of community-based services and residential treatment, and have standards for service providers, that will assist the court system in referring individuals to the proper providers.

Availability of community-based services and residential treatment, and having standards for service providers, will assist the court system in referring individuals to the proper providers. A centralized list or hub would be a useful tool. Services should be available to those that are at high-risk of, or those that are confirmed of being trafficked.

The National Trafficking Resource Center hosts a hotline, and provide names and numbers of resources in any given area. We need to strengthen communities to respond and make sure the correct agencies are listed on that Hotline.

A statewide hub, which has vetted treatment providers for trafficked persons, would be a useful tool for court systems when they need help determining what services could be utilized for the youth or adult.

Service providers are urged to keep families in mind, as the issue affects the whole family.

4. There is a need for properly trained court

advocates so people do not keep cycling through the judicial system.

The courts in Winnebago County have started a Pre-Trial Deferred Prosecution Program for those charged with solicitation of a prostitute, offered through the State's Attorney's Office. Each participant must admit guilt, complete a Compulsive Sex Program Assessment and any counseling recommendations from that assessment, complete a Changing Attitudes and Behavior Program, and any other recommendations as are dictated by the community panel. If all terms and conditions of the agreement are completed, the charge is dismissed.

Training of court advocates can also assist in the despair that law enforcement can sometimes feel in that the current statutes and penalties are not "working"- or that cases are continually being dismissed or negotiated to a point that it is no longer worthwhile to pursue those arrests.

Recommendations for Prosecution

1. Continued conversation on the status of decriminalizing prostitution is recommended. However, further information is needed on the impact of the legalization of prostitution on human trafficking and on survivors of human trafficking and sex workers.

Law enforcement does not suggest decriminalizing prostitution. Currently, the fact that commercial sex is a criminal act gives law enforcement authority to investigate in order to identify trafficked persons and prosecute traffickers; it is the criminal predicate to begin the investigation. If prostitution were legal, law enforcement would not have a lawful basis to proactively investigate without a complaint of force or knowledge that the person prostituted was a child. Under the current law, where there is reasonable suspicion that prostitution is occurring, task force officers have a legal basis to look more closely, to see if trafficking is occurring beneath the surface. And task force officers focus their efforts on pursuing traffickers, not charging persons with prostitution. Sometimes, through the court process, individuals can also begin to find and gain access to relationships and services that will eventually lead to leaving life as a sex worker. The decriminalization of prostitution does not answer all the problems associated with human trafficking. However, trafficked persons, sex workers, and victim rights advocates believe that it is a place to start. The decriminalizing of prostitution may provide opportunities for sex workers and human trafficking survivors to begin to organize and protect themselves.

2. Clarify “involuntary servitude” statute regarding whether knowledge of age is required for conviction.

The Safe Children’s Act limited the availability of the affirmative defense of mistaken age when an individual is charged with “promoting juvenile prostitution.” However, this same limitation does not apply to those charged under the “involuntary servitude” statute. Prosecutors understand that they must prove knowledge of age beyond a reasonable doubt. The Law Enforcement Work Group is not specifically recommending a modification to the statutes, but if the legislators’ intent was to limit the affirmative defense usage in “involuntary servitude” cases, clarification would be needed.

3. Merge “patronizing a prostitute” and “solicitation” statutes together for clarification, if doing so matches the legislators’ intent.

Prosecutors mentioned that the patronizing charge requires penetration, and is difficult to prove; therefore, prosecutors are more likely to utilize “solicitation of a sexual act” charge. It was noted that the patronizing charge was recently strengthened by the inclusion of a $1,500 fine and vehicle impoundment, but the solicitation charge was not.

4. Impose stricter penalties for perpetrators of human trafficking.

Advocates for trafficked persons recommended stricter penalties for purchasers; swift and severe to end demand. Law enforcement has found that local ordinances can be a practical solution to address the issue of demand. Law enforcement reports that buyers of sex can be deterred from future purchasing when large fines are in place. Ordinances exist and are utilized in Chicago, permitting up to $2,000 in fines, with 60% of the fine funding women’s service centers and 40% of the fine funding juvenile justice. It was noted, however, that there is a need for education- to educate buyers that purchasing sex is not a victimless crime. Some attendees noted that perhaps all parties involved should be accountable, including websites and innkeepers. City Councils could establish regulations for businesses to register and for there to be oversight on spas and massage parlors. It was noted that perhaps innkeepers do know what is occurring, and some will call law enforcement and some will not. There may be a need for better regulations for innkeepers to keep records, and for websites to keep records of who is posting.

Conclusion

The report has found several deficiencies in both the legislative and regulatory environments. Improvement in the care of trafficked persons and prevention could be made with the statewide coordination of efforts. It is important that efforts across the state are coordinated, integrated and not duplicated.

A unified, statewide data collection reporting system and evaluation methodology is vital. Standards should be created to guide the provision of services from private, public, and non-profit agencies, who interact with trafficked persons. The use of nationally recognized tools and educational resources should be required. Best practices for survivor-centered and trauma-informed care should align local, state, regional, and national efforts. This will improve service delivery coordination to increase the positive impact on trafficked persons.

The Human Trafficking Task Force and its various subcommittees have described the human trafficking problem as it exists in Illinois. Between the years of 2007-2017 almost 3,000 people have been trafficked in the State of Illinois according to data from the Jane Addams Center for Social Policy and Research at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Human trafficking takes on various forms such as labor or sex trafficking. Regardless of the form it takes, human trafficking is a crime. People of all ages, genders, races, and socioeconomic backgrounds can fall prey to human trafficking. The Task Force's main priority is providing trafficked persons with resources and support. Traffickers are targeting their prey in both rural and urban settings, in our schools, businesses and tourist areas. Trafficking cases have been reported across Illinois and no community is immune. Additionally, the Internet has made it easier for children to be bought and sold. According to the Polaris Project, the organization responsible for maintaining the National Human Trafficking Hotline, there are an estimated 100,000 new escort advertisements every day and many are selling children.

The effects of this crime are reverberating across the nation and our state. Through a series of hearings across the state of Illinois, we gained added insight into the magnitude of modern day slavery. We learned more about the negative impact on trafficked persons, the systems of care needed to support survivors, and the policies that must be instituted to combat human trafficking.

The task force urges the members of the Illinois General Assembly, the Governor, and the Executive Branch agencies to review the recommendations. The recommendations will not only improve outcomes for trafficked persons but will also make Illinois a leader in comprehensive human trafficking reform. We must focus on education and training to alleviate the recruiting, transporting, and exploiting of trafficked persons. We must also focus on the health and safety of these individuals by using trauma-informed and survivor-centered care to spearhead initiatives designed to promote their wellbeing. Legislatively, we must make the issue of human trafficking a priority to continue the progress that has been made in Illinois thus far.

This Task Force has laid out recommendations in the areas of law enforcement, education and awareness, and services. We understand that the issues may require a financial investment in resources and education as well as collaboration to achieve the desired outcomes. Stakeholders and allies must work together to implement these recommendations in order to make the vision outlined by this Task Force a reality. The implementation of the recommendations contained in this report may serve as a blueprint for making Illinois a leader in human trafficking reform.
